- All milk and dairy products are fat-free or low-fat and provide an excellent source of calcium, vitamin D, and potassium. Elementary schools offer flavored milk at lunch.

Hungry Children Have Difficulty Learning

Studies show that hungry children have lower math and reading scores. They also demonstrate a higher incidence of behavioral, emotional, and academic problems. A well fed child has more energy available for cognitive and social activities resulting in decreased learning difficulties.

Children who eat breakfast at school, meaning they eat closer to class and test taking time, perform better on tests than those who skip breakfast.
